Dear Al:

A few days ago I had a long talk with Jean Monnet about developments in France, in general. I imagine that he will now have returned to Paris. In the course of this, he asked about the book I had written on Germany, apparently having my "Germany's Underground" in mind and I promised to send him a copy, which is being sent you with this letter. Please explain to him that MacMillan was the publisher of the book; that it has been entirely sold out and I have only one or two copies left. However, I had some reprints made personally for private use and I would be glad if you would pass on this copy to him. It is a true replica of the original except that the picture of the author on the back flyleaf has been pasted in a different place.

I thought this would give you a chance to pay a call on Jean Monnet at your leisure and give him my regards and the book.

Faithfully yours,
